Have you ever seen a hen lay an egg?

Jane Goodall did!

When she was a child, she waited in a henhouse.

Then she saw it happen. A hen laid an egg!

Jane loved learning about animals.

Look! This hen has laid eggs in its nest.

When Jane grew up, she went to Tanzania, Africa.

She worked at a park.

She studied chimpanzees there.

It was not easy.

chimpanzee

At first, the chimpanzees ran away from Jane.

Then, one chimp let Jane get close.

Jane named him
David Greybeard.

Soon, other chimpanzees
let Jane get close, too.

David Greybeard likes eating bananas.

Jane learned chimps show happiness, sadness, and fear.

Sometimes they hug and kiss.

When chimps talk to each other, they hoot, bark, and grunt.

chimp hooting

Jane watches Fifi pick bugs off of a baby chimp.

Jane studied chimps for many years.

She learned how chimps live and eat.

She saw chimps use sticks to get termites to eat.

Some termites live in mounds.

mound

This chimp is eating termites from a mound.

Jane saw that some baby chimps have no mother.

So, she opened an orphanage for these chimps.

An orphanage is a safe place for baby chimps to grow up.

This man works at the orphanage. He lets the baby chimps play outside.

Jane hates to see chimps
in cages.

Samson has been in a cage for a long time. Jane visits him.

Jane works to keep all chimpanzees safe.

She hopes you will, too!

Jane visits Samson at a zoo in Kenya.

A CHIMP GROWS UP!

Like people, chimpanzees take many years to become adults.

1

This is a baby chimp. It stays close to its mother. The mother chimp feeds her baby.

2

This chimp could be 5 to 7 years old. It will learn how to do things by watching its mother.

3

This chimp could be 8 to 13 years old. It spends time with adult chimps to learn new things.

5

This chimp is old! Scientists still do not know how long chimps can live.

4

This chimp could be 13 to 33 years old. It is a grown-up with a baby of its own.
